

Southeastern, Your Great Commission Seminary

At Southeastern Seminary and The College at Southeastern, our mission is to glorify the Lord Jesus Christ by equipping students to serve the Church and fulfill the Great Commission. We believe that serving the Church best means partnering with local churches to train students who are committed to the authority of Scripture, the priority of local church ministry, and the urgency of the Great Commission.

This commitment to local church ministry and to Great Commission partnerships is in the DNA of our institution. That is why our faculty are pastors, deacons, Bible study teachers, and ministry leaders in their local churches. That is why our students are equipped to be actively involved in the mission and ministries of Southern Baptist churches. And that is why our alumni are committed to serving and leading local churches as they work to fulfill the Great Commission among the nations.

It was this DNA that shaped Josiah and Emily Gwyn's season of training at Southeastern. Discipled and called to ministry in his local church, Josiah studied English and theology at The College to learn how to better articulate biblical truth and serve the Church by making disciples of Jesus. At the same time, Emily studied intercultural studies at the seminary to more effectively share the gospel cross-culturally and strengthen the local church's heart for the nations.

Now serving in Memphis, Tennessee, Josiah is on staff at Bellevue Baptist Church, and together Emily and Josiah are having a Great Commission impact on their community.

"Because of Southeastern's Great Commission culture, I caught a heart for the nations—for the Great Commission in every context," Josiah said. "Now in Memphis, I am asking, 'How does our church reach the people in our neighborhoods?' Because of Southeastern, we'll never forget the lostness of our neighbors or the nations around us."
